We put up with the noise from an illegal vacation rental behind us, for years, before we realized it was an Airbnb. We had to go in person to meet with the city and they did shut it down, but the memory of those awful years remains: music at all hours, screaming and yelling while they swam in the pool at night, and early morning parties, followed by the sound of the next group arriving. Please consider that we live in residential neighborhoods, not vacation sites. Thank you! It's easier to regulate now, before it proliferates more? Let's be proactive.
